

Spelling list: Words ending in -ice

On the end of a word of more than one syllable the /iss/ sound is usually spelled ice .

|            |                                                                                                                      |
|------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| bodice     | The bodice of her wedding dress fits perfectly.                                                               |
| hospice    | We are raising funds to build a new hospice .                                                                 |
| justice    | The killer will be brought to justice .                                                                       |
| lattice    | Ivy grew up the lattice fence.                                                                                |
| malice     | I did not feel any malice towards her.                                                                        |
| novice     | I am a complete novice at the game of darts.                                                                  |
| office     | I'll call your office to say you are sick.                                                                    |
| practice   | He tried to put his new maths skills into practice , but still needed a calculator to work out the final sum. |
| service    | Call room service to order breakfast.                                                                         |
| solstice   | The summer solstice is the longest day of the year.                                                           |
| accomplice | The criminal and his accomplice were jailed.                                                                  |
| apprentice | The plumbing company employed Jim as an apprentice .                                                          |
| precipice  | She felt like she was standing at the edge of a precipice .                                                   |
| prejudice  | The article exposes the company's deep-rooted prejudice against women.                                        |